Cache of Gold Hunted in Reich

U. S. Gets Tip on Existence Of Vast Treasure Hidden By Ribbentrop.

NUERNBERG, GERMANY. — A treasure hunt in search of millions of dollars in gold, perhaps as much as 50 million dollars, which Germany was cached by Joachim Ribbentrop, Hitler's foreign minister, has been embarked upon by the American war crimes prosecution.

They say the treasure probably was buried in churches, on farms, perhaps still tucked away in forgotten corners of former German embassies abroad.

Existence of the funds was tipped off here by former henchmen of Ribbentrop in the Nazi foreign ministry. In guarded hints, they disclosed it during interrogations by Dr. Robert M. W. Kempner, who prepared the prosecution of the German ministers under Hitler.

Ribbentrop Hanged.

Ribbentrop was hanged here as a war criminal October 16, 1946, before the prosecutors got on the trail of the hidden gold. American agents had done subtle a magnificent job of finding loot, Kempner said, that it never occurred to anyone to look behind the foreign office files.

Ribbentrop had four funds — a general budget, a "secret" fund of about four million dollars, a war emergency fund of unlimited amounts and a "super-secret" personal allotment which held at one time at least 45 million dollars, according to Kempner.

Starting in 1935, Kempner said, Ribbentrop began to ship gold in small bars to various embassies "in the event that war should come."

Whether he wanted this as a personal "nest egg" is something that remained locked in the minister's mind.

Just Plain Loot.

In 1938, he intensified the shipment campaign after he got control of the ministry itself by replacing Konstantin von Neurath. The first shipment was valued at $100,000, and it was the smallest of all.

So much was sent to the various embassies that German ministers abroad objected to such heavy responsibility, the files show.

Ribbentrop got some of the gold from Goering's four year plan setup. The major source, however, amounted to plain loot.

When a nation was overrun, Kempner said, Ribbentrop's men reached the captured national banks before Finance Minister Hjalmar Schicht's bankers.

In the final days of the Reich, Ribbentrop shipped truckloads of gold to southern Germany for hiding, Kempner said, and some of his trusted female secretaries accompanied the convoys. At the same time, Ribbentrop paid many civil servants salaries as much as several years in advance just to get rid of the surplus. In China, the Nazi embassy diverted much gold to what they called "needy Germans."

Perplexed Cops Discover For Whom Bridge Tolls

PHILADELPHIA. — A Delaware river bridge policeman figures he's seen everything now.

A solemn-looking, slow-moving hearse entered the Philadelphia side of the bridge. The policeman saw a pair of feet sticking out the back door.

He phoned the Camden side to "stop that hearse."

At the toll gate, Sgt. Joseph McWilliams told the driver he was losing his cargo.

"Oh, no," said the driver, "they're my friends."

Sure enough, there were three young men scattered on the floor of the hearse, one with his feet sticking out.

The boys — University of Pennsylvania students — explained they had raised $300 and bought the hearse. They were out for a joy ride.

McWilliams let them go, slowly shaking his head.

Exposure Kills Sleeper in Forest; Found by Job Seeker

MILTON, PA. — Mrs. 'Bessie Gilles Sincox, 38, was found dead in a woods where she and her husband had been living without shelter, State Policeman Leo R. Armbruster reported.

Dr. Sidney Calloway, Northumberland county coroner, said Mrs. Sincox apparently died after a heart attack brought on by malnutrition and exposure.

Armbruster said the woman's body was discovered by her husband, Henry, when he returned from a job hunt. The couple had been sleeping in the wooded section with only a few blankets for protection, Armbruster said.

Derrick Thief Gets Shock When Judge Hears His Story

PITTSBURGH, PA. — Emmitt Thompson, 37, arraigned here on a charge of stealing a 30-foot steel derrick, explained he had a lot of trouble dismantling the apparatus piece by piece before selling the parts to a junkman.

Judge Thomas M. Marshall listened to Thompson's hard-work story, then ordered him released after he has paid the costs of prosecution plus $500—the estimated cost of the derrick.

Book Store Clears Wanderers' Mail

'Postoffice' at Seattle Services Letters for Travelers.

SEATTLE. — A stranger's offhand remark to the proprietor of an old book store nearly 40 years ago started Seattle's Wanderers' postoffice, a novel service through which some 600 globe-trotters get their mail.

It started in 1909, when William Howard Taft was president and Seattle was putting on the Alaska-Pacific-Yukon exposition, celebrating the decade since the great Yukon gold rush, and this is how it began:

A stranger one day strolled into Raymer's old book store, browsed around a bit and played and lost a game of checkers to the proprietor, Charles D. Raymer, who since has died.

As the stranger was leaving, he turned back in afterthought and said:

"Say, I need a place to get my mail. Would you let me use your store as my address?"

Raymer cleaned out a pigeonhole in his cluttered desk, and said:

"There. There's a postoffice box you can have for the rest of your life."

The next day a friend of Raymer's new acquaintance dropped in. He wanted a box, too, and Raymer obligingly cleaned out another pigeonhole.

Two lumberjacks bound for a winter in the woods asked the book store owner to handle their mail. Raymer's growing extra business began to get a bit too big for an office desk.

He built a tier of letter boxes and began to charge $2 a year for them, including forwarding service.

Today, the Wanderers' postoffice, operated by Raymer's successors, Mr. and Mrs. Lew Charson, has nearly 600 active boxes and space for 400 more.

The boxholders are scattered all over the world—seamen, travelers, authors, business men. Some of them Charson has never seen. They send in their box rent ($3 a year now) and occasionally supply a new forwarding address.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad, but loving remembrance of our Father, Mr. A. W. Almond, who passed away two years ago, November 24, 1945.
November brings sad memories
Of our loved one gone to rest,
You'll always be remembered
By those who loved you best.

Dear, we can see your face before us now,
Can feel your hand sublime.
The last sweet look you gave us,
Still lingers in our mind.

It has been lonely for those who
Loved you since that sad day,
But you left sweet memories
That nothing can take away.

—Sadly missed by Daughter, Mrs. Herman Carter, and son, Mr. Samuel Almond.

Policemen Get Last Laugh On Frisky Tavern Joker

ELKHART, IND. — A woman who called Elkhart police and asked to be arrested was only kidding. But the cops got the last laugh.

The woman said she was drunk and would they send a squad car to a tavern to pick her up. When police arrived, she had disappeared.

A few minutes later, she called again, from another tavern. This time the desk lieutenant engaged her in a long conversation.

While he talked, other police raced to the tavern and arrested the befuddled woman before she had finished her conversation.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Charles E. Jones who departed this life 8 years ago today, November 23rd, 1939.

Thrift Gardens Cut Food Bills

Millions of Families Raise Their Own Vegetables to Offset High Costs.

NEW YORK. — By raising their own vegetables, between 16 and 18 million families in the United States have cut down high food bills. The victory garden of the war years has reverted to a thrift garden.

The president of a large seed house estimates that as a result the average family has saved from $50 to $200 on their food bill this season.

"The consumer really started the present drive as a check on the high cost of living," said Rodney H. Brandon, president of National Garden Institute, sponsor of a thrift garden movement begun last spring.

Just how much home gardeners will produce this season has not yet been determined, but a department of agriculture spokesman said the garden total is around 75 to 80 per cent of the wartime peak.

Good Garden Year.

At that time, victory gardeners raised eight to nine million tons of foodstuffs, or more than 40 per cent of the entire U. S. vegetable production.

"It has not been a good garden year in some areas of the country, because of the wet spring, followed by drouth so yields may not be as great as anticipated," said H. W. Hochbaum, chief of the division of field coordination extension service of the department of agriculture.

A recent report of the garden institute, however, had a more optimistic view.

"Home gardens are paying off even better than last year, despite the unfavorable season, is the verdict of families that have them," the institute said. "Conditions vary according to region and locality, but most reports are favorable."

Seed Sales Go Up.

James H. Burdett of National Garden bureau recently told the American Seed Trade association that the peak of garden seed sales was reached in 1943, after which there was a falling off, to a point in 1946 where sales were 400 per cent higher than in 1939.

"The 1947 sales were 10 per cent greater than a year ago," Burdett stated. The department of agriculture said its reports from seedsmen indicated seed sales are up about 5 per cent over 1946.

"Most of the home gardeners will can more this year than they have before," said John Flessner, president of Peter Henderson company seed house. One reason for that is said to be the greater availability of canning and freezing equipment.

Besides home gardens, the garden institute said, more than 40 per cent of companies which had employee gardens during the war are continuing them.

Legislation is introduced seeking to outlaw Communism.
